"You're Too Pretty To Be Fined," Sighs Judge to Gail Kane

Miss Gail Kane.

GLENN COVE, I. T.—"You are too pretty to be fined, but the next time you come before me for the same offense will have to suffer," said Justice Lyster of Glen Cove when Gail Kane, moving picture actress, was brought before him on a charge of speeding.

Miss Kane was arrested by a motorcycle policeman. There is a fine of $10 for first offenders, and when Miss Kane appeared to answer the charge she pleaded guilty at once. But her beauty was too much for the judge.

Mr. Thomas Washburn of Ottawa, Kan., will come tomorrow to be the guest for the weekend of his brother-in-law, Mr. Walter D. Caldwell.

Mr. W. W. Edwards and Mr. Hall Edwards will leave Saturday for Culver, Ind., where Mr. Hall Edwards will attend the Culver Military academy this winter.

To Prevent Old Age Coming too Soon!

"Toxic poisons in the blood are thrown out by the kidneys. The kidneys act as filters for such poisons. If we wish to prevent old age coming too soon and increase our chances for a long life, we should drink plenty of pure water and take a little 'Anuric,'" says the famous Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y. When suffering from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, the simple way to overcome these disorders is merely to obtain a little "Anuric" from your nearest druggist and you will quickly notice the grand results. You will find it thirty-seven times more potent than lithia, and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.—Adv.

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE by Adele Garrison

WHEN Lillian Underwood told me that year before she had given up her baby daughter in payment for her husband's withdrawal of Dicky's name as co-respondent in his suit against her for divorce, my first impulse was one of horror-stricken sympathy for her.

"Then came the reaction. A flaming jealousy enveloped me from head to foot.

"How she must have loved Dicky to do this for him!" The thought came upon my brain like a sledge hammer.

"Don't think that, my dear, for it isn't true." I had not spoken, but with her almost uncanny ability to define the thoughts of other people, she had fathomed mine. "I was always very fond of Dicky, but I never was in love with him."

"Then why did you make such a sacrifice?" I stammered.

"Why! There was absolutely no other way," she said, opening her wonderful eyes wide in amazement that I had not at once grasped her point of view. "Dicky was absolutely innocent of any wrong doing, but through a combination of circumstances of which I shall tell you, my husband had gathered a show of evidence which would have won him the divorce if it had been presented."

"He bargained with me. I to give up all claim to the baby. He to withdraw Dicky's name, and all other charges except that of desertion. Thus Dicky was saved a scandal which would have followed and hampered him all his life, and I was spared the fastening of a shameful verdict upon me. Of course, everybody who read about the case and did not know me, believed me guilty anyway, and my friends stood by me gallantly, and that part of it is all right. But every time I look at that baby face I am tempted to wish that I had let honor, the righting of Dicky, everything go by the boards, and taken my chance of having her, even if it were only part of the time."

A Woman's Sympathy. Her voice was rough, unsexed, as she finished speaking, but that was the only evidence of the emotion which I knew must have been stretched upon the rack. Right there I capitulated to Lillian Underwood. Always, through my dislike and distrust of her, there had struggled an admiration which would not down even when I thought I had most cause to fear her.

But this revelation of the real bigness of the woman caught my allegiance and fixed it. She had sacrificed the thing which was most precious to her to keep her ideal of honor unsullied. I felt that I could never have made a similar sacrifice, but I mentally saluted her for her power to do it.

I realized, too, the reason for Dicky's deference to Mrs. Underwood, which had often puzzled and sometimes angered me. Once when she had given him a raking over for the temper he displayed toward me in her presence he had said:

"You know I couldn't get angry at you, no matter what you said. I owe you too much."

I had wondered at the time what it was that my husband "owed" Mrs. Underwood. The riddle was solved for me at last.

I am not an impetuous woman, and I do not know how I ever mustered up courage to do it. But the sight of Lillian Underwood's face as she looked at her baby's picture was too much for me. Without any conscious volition on my part I found my arms around her, and her face pressed against my shoulder.

Playing the Game. I expected a storm of grief, for I knew the woman had been holding herself in with an iron hand. But only a few convulsive movements of her shoulders betrayed her emotion, and when she raised her face to mine her eyes were less tear-bedewed than my own.

"It's lucky this armorplate of mine is warranted," she said with a brave attempt at her usual mocking tone, "or your gown would be plastered with powder and rouge."

I made no reply. In my new-born friendship for Mrs. Underwood, one which I felt would be an enduring one, I wished, oh, so earnestly, that she could be brought to abandon the tawdry vulgar mask of rouge and powder which she continually used.

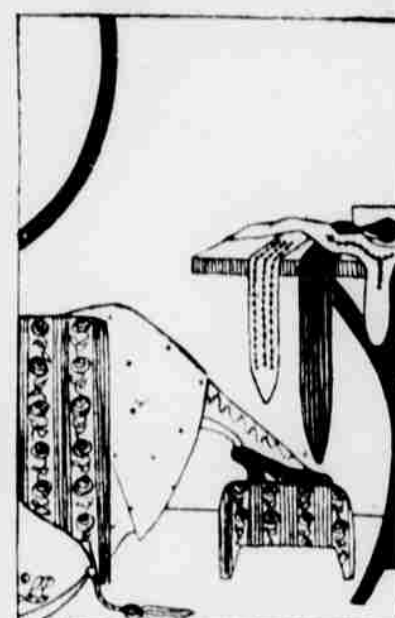

"I know," she said, again divining and answering my unspoken thought.

Another Competent Corsetiere Joins Our Staff of Trained Service Experts

Miss Agnes Boyer, of St. Louis, Ready to Explain the Merits of Our Corsets

This expert corsetiere comes to join Mrs. B. F. Gibbons, Miss Edith Largent and other trained corset experts who have contributed so largely to the Scott-Halliburton Company corset service. Miss Boyer has spent many years in studying everything there is to know about corsets. You may learn from her as well as others in our corset section how health and comfort are successfully combined with a stylish figure.

Come and Learn of Our Service

The Scott-Halliburton Company corset service is not merely a stock of corsets on our shelves for you to select at random. THIS is what our corset service means.

We look over all the lines for the current season to discover what the features are. Having seen them all, we make a careful selection to obtain for you the proper models of the year, selecting distinctive models for every type of figure—the short figure, large figure, slender or full, etc. We then study the individual styles that we have selected until our corsetieres can tell which model is exactly what each type of figure needs.

Ready to Fit You in "Your" Model

So when you come to us for corsets we can give you the benefit of this careful study, backed by years of training in the corset business. Whether your selection is a lace front or a lace back style, we have models that will fit you and for this reason we particularly recommend for their authentic design and comfortable fit the new models of Redferns, Warner's, Bon-Tons, Royal Worcesters, Madame Lyras, American Lady, Gossard Front Lace, Nemos.
